

Fund name changes effective 2 December 2009

BLACKROCK

To assist in understanding how the new fund names relate to those you have been familiar with in the past, the table below summarises the naming conventions to be employed in the future.

New naming convention basis

BlackRock Indexed	This refers to the range of index funds that each seek to match the return of their respective benchmark – with a strong focus on managing risk, return and cost. Since launching the first index fund in 1971, we have led the industry in index portfolio construction and methodology. Today, we manage more indexed assets than any other firm in the world and are recognised as a leader in indexed investing.
BlackRock Scientific	This refers to the range of active risk-controlled funds that we manage. Our unique and innovative approach seeks to apply the discipline of science to the art of investing. Simply stated, scientific investing is a highly disciplined and systematic approach to active management that maximises skill, breadth and efficiency in portfolios to deliver superior and consistent risk and return outcomes to clients. We continue to transform quantitative active management through the passionate pursuit of scientific investing.
